“Brilliant.”

Other Comments Received

“Would like to see my named doctor more frequently, rather than another doctor. If not could I see the same locum?” (continuity of care)

“Turn the Tannoy up.”

“Timing of appointments - evenings better than Saturday. Would like own GP for continuity.”

“Fantastic nurses, reception, very good blood test nurse. Reception speaker system - doctors need to speak louder, as it isn't very loud. When people are talking you can't hear your name called out.”

Recommendations

- The surgery look into the volume and clarity of the tannoy system so that patients can better hear notifications.
- Currently delays in appointments are communicated by Reception Staff and the electronic check-in system. Surgery to consider introducing the use of the TV system to support communication of waiting times/delays.
- Practice Manager to discuss the potential of the PPG taking over responsibility for ensuring that information on notice boards is up to date and displayed in a user friendly format.
- The surgery to look at the concerns expressed by their patients in respect of the reception service.

Surgery Response

We invited Healthwatch to visit our surgery as part of their Surgery Enter and View Programme. The team spent time talking to patients in the waiting room on a busy Monday Morning. Verbal feedback was given to me on the day.

- As far as the tannoy system allows, we will try to improve the volume. Patients are asked to notify the receptionist on duty if they are having difficulty hearing their name.
- We will attempt to communicate any sustained unforeseen lengthy delays via the TV screen. To upload information to the TV for short delays would be cumbersome. However, consideration will be made to the utilisation of the tannoy system to communicate delays.

- Shortly after the visit and before the report was received, a scheduled Patient Participation Group meeting was held and the findings of the visit reported to the group. Discussion surrounded their involvement with the practice notice boards and the boards have since been over-hauled.
- Customer service is important to us and the comments expressed by some patients will be examined at the next reception team meeting/training.

We would like to thank Healthwatch for their time and constructive comments and also to thank the patients involved for their willingness to be interviewed.
